From the Vice President for Administration and Finance

"Wartburg is people." We hear it often—from students, from faculty, from alums, from the community, from friends of the college. And we affirm it—because it is true. Wartburg's greatest asset—by far—is the quality and commitment of the people who identify with it.

But Wartburg is also a place—a campus—a physical setting for the educational enterprise which is central to the college's life and mission. The campus is one of the major assets of the college. Consequently, it needs to reflect the same commitment to excellence as we find in the faculty or in the academic program.

The Design for Tomorrow has made possible some splendid new facilities—a Physical Education Complex, the Whitehouse Business Center, an addition to the Student Union. Each has changed the face of the campus; each has enhanced the quality of the "Wartburg experience."

New facilities are and will continue to be essential to the life of the college. But it is also essential that we care for that which we already have. This means constant renovation and replacement; it means new roofs and new windows; it means retrofitting old buildings to make them energy efficient; it means a continued process of repainting and repair; it means a renovated Den and Food Service. And it means giving new life to a historic building.

The renovation of Old Main is now completed. If you have not seen it, we hope that you will do so soon. We think that you will be pleased with the way the building has been fitted out for use by new generations of students and faculty. And we are confident that you will be surprised at how little the character of the building has changed. Old Main is once again the proud centerpiece of the Wartburg campus.

A campus needs to be functional; it ought to enhance academic excellence; it ought to be a place of beauty. This means a concern for architecture and campus planning; it requires a continuing process of improving the landscape. In recent years a host of "mini-projects" have been undertaken: the planting of trees, the creation of several small plazas, new campus signs. This past summer has seen a major landscaping project in the central campus. The result is a new sidewalk system, new green space, new plantings, new lighting. More is in store.

If you have not seen the campus recently, please come and visit us. You will probably be surprised by what you will find. And we hope that you will be pleased!

Three named to Board of Regents

Three new members have been elected to the Board of Regents at Wartburg.

They are Fred W. Hagemann '67 of Waverly, Gerry Zimmerman '53 of Mendota, Ill., and Paul F. Ohman of Moline, Ill.

Ohman is to complete a term, which will expire in 1988, while Hagemann and Zimmerman were elected to terms of six years which expire in 1992.

Earlier announced as a nominee for the board and elected for a term to expire in 1988 is Gwen Boeke of Cresco, Iowa. Incumbents returned to the board for six-year terms were Ivan J. Ackerman of Waverly, W. Louis Beecher of Waterloo, Iowa, Dr. David Grube '61 of Minneapolis, Richard C. Young of Waterloo, Iowa, and the Rev. Alton Zenker '55 of Rantoul, Ill.

The board members were elected by the Wartburg Corporation at its biennial meeting in Minneapolis.

Going off the board will be Calvin C. Peterson of Bettendorf, Iowa, who had been vice chair, and the Rev. Robert H. Herder '51 of Wausau, Wis. The third new member is an addition to the board.

Hagemann is president and chief executive officer of the State Bank of Waverly. He previously was an examiner in the Supervision and Regulation Division of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. He has been a director of the Iowa Independent Bankers Association, the Iowa Bankers Association and the Commu-ity Bankers Division of the American Bankers Association, a president of the Iowa Independent Bankers Association and currently is treasurer and a member of the executive committee of the Iowa Bankers Association. He earned an M.B.A. degree at Drake University in 1972.

Zimmerman, who attended Wartburg from 1949 through 1951, is secretary of the Crossroads Counseling Center Board in Mendota, Ill., a Christian counseling service for families, individuals and those with drug and alcohol problems. She is active in the church, particularly on the local, conference and district level of the American Lutheran Church Women and currently is vice president of the Illinois District of the ALCW. A member of St. John's Lutheran Church in Mendota, she has directed church choirs, led Bible Studies, taught Sunday School and Vacation Bible School and is involved as a small group leader of "Search" Bible Study. ## Enrollment up for fifth year

For the fifth consecutive year, Wartburg's Fall Term enrollment shows an increase, according to figures released by Dr. Edwin H. Welch, provost of the college.

The total count has reached a 14-year high of 1,329, up six over last year's final figure of 1,323.

During that five-year period, Wartburg's enrollment has jumped 23 percent.

Included in the total figure are 1,216 full-time students as compared to 1,201 last fall.

Some 411 are new students, down from last year's total of 433, including 17 new international students and seven students taking an off-campus program at Deere and Co., Waterloo.

There also is an increase in the full-time equivalency (FTE) figure over last year. It is 1,266 as compared to 1,254 in 1985. FTE translates the number of special and part-time students into a full-time figure (full-time is defined as students taking three courses or more in a term). This figure is significant because of its impact on academic and administrative programming.

Welch attributed the enrollment increase to efforts to increase retention.

"It is readily apparent that there was a significant increase in the number and percentage of returning students," he said. "We made a conscious effort last year to better meet the needs of students eligible to return, and it was successful."

Welch said that a survey of students last spring was an early indicator of student satisfaction in such areas as academic programs, contact with faculty, campus life, residential life and student activities.

"It showed us that students felt they were living in a positive environment," Welch said.

Doug Mason, who is now vice president for advancement but was last year's vice president for student affairs, said he felt two factors contributed to student satisfaction.

"There was good communication between the administration and the student body last year," he said. "The administration met on a regular basis with the students, and that gave students an opportunity for substantial input."

The second factor, he said, was an emphasis on counseling students who were experiencing difficulties.

"We had a proactive program identifying students who were having adjustment or academic problems in their college careers and then worked with them to correct the problem areas."

'51, are members of the Illinois District Major Gift Committee of Commitment to Mission. She served on the Wartburg alumni board from 1979 through 1982, and four of her five children have attended Wartburg.

Ohman, a graduate of the University of Minnesota, has had 25 years of manufacturing and management experience. He currently is general manager of the John Deere Harvester Works in East Moline, Ill.

Christmas with Wartburg goes to Des Moines

REDEDICATION—The key to Old Main is passed from the faculty representative, Dr. Raymond Harms of the religion department, to the staff representative, Randeen Ellefson, campus nurse, during the rededication ceremony of the historic structure Oct. 19. President Robert Vogel (l-r), the Rev. Larry Trachte, campus pastor, Irving R. Burling, chair of the college's Board of Regents, and Patty Driscoll, a junior from Preston, Iowa, who represented the students, also participated in the ceremony, which was a highlight of the Homecoming Weekend. Wm. H. Engelbrecht '50, former chair of the Board of Regents and a Waverly attorney, reflected on the history of Old Main during the rededication. Old Main was completely renovated as a part of Phase III of The Wartburg Design for Tomorrow. Built in 1880, it is on the National Register of Historic Places.

CELEBRATION BRUNCH—Some 1,162 of the nearly 8,000 donors to The Wartburg Design for Tomorrow participated in a Celebration Brunch following the rededication of Old Main during Homecoming Weekend. The brunch was served in the Physical Education Center, one of the three projects completed as a result of the national funding program. The other major capital improvement projects were the Bridge Building, including the Whitehouse Business Center, and the renovation of Old Main. Keynoting the brunch were President Robert Vogel, Calvin C. Peterson, a national co-chair of all three phases of DFT, and Robert R. Buckmaster and Robert A. Hanson, national honorary co-chairs.

Christmas with Wartburg is expanding this holiday season.

It will continue in Cedar Falls, Iowa, the Friday before the campus productions but then will move to Des Moines, Iowa, the following Monday.

The Cedar Falls production will be Friday, Dec. 5, at Nazareth Lutheran Church, beginning at 8 p.m. The two campus performances will be Saturday, Dec. 6, at 8 p.m., and Sunday, Dec. 7, at 2:30 p.m. The new Des Moines production will be Monday, Dec. 8, at 7:30 p.m. in the Plymouth Congregational United Church of Christ, 4126 Ingersoll Ave., at 7:30 p.m.

What once was billed as Wartburg's gift to Northeast Iowa can now include Central Iowa. There is no admission charge to any of these events.

Christmas at Wartburg tells the Christmas story in word and song, utilizing all the major music organizations on campus. This year's theme is O, Come, All Ye Faithful.

The annual Christmas Carol Buffet is scheduled in conjunction with the Christmas at Wartburg performance on campus Sunday, Dec. 7.

It begins with a special Castle Room setting at 12:30 p.m., prior to the 2:30 performance. The Madrigal Singers from the Wartburg Choir will be doing traditional music during the meal.

Following the performance, there will be two settings in the Castle Room, at 4 and 5:30 p.m., and one each in Buhr Lounge and the Dining Hall of the Student Memorial Union, beginning at 4 p.m.

Traditional Christmas music by ensembles from the Wartburg Choir, in costume, will be performed during the dining periods.

Tickets are $8 for all settings. Advance reservations may be made through the Visitors Center. A stamped, self-addressed envelope, plus payment, must accompany all orders.

Write: Christmas Carol Buffet, Wartburg College, Visitors Center, 222 9th St. N.W., P.O. Box 1003, Waverly, Iowa 50677.

Seven join Wartburg staff, faculty

Seven new staff and faculty members, five of them alumni, have been appointed at Wartburg for the 1986-87 academic year.

Two are in development, Kenton L. Zellmer '64, who has been named director of special gifts, and Linda Moeller '66, who is director of annual gifts; three are admission counselors, Deandra Katko, formerly of Edyville, Iowa, Nancy Hertel '70 of Waverly and Beth Olson '85, formerly of Menomonie, Wis.; one is the campus photographer, a new position, Rod Vander Werf of Cedar Falls, Iowa; and the seventh is an assistant pastor and part-time instructor in religion, the Rev. Herbert J. Hafermann '59, who is on a year's sabbatical leave from his ministry in Tanzania.

Zellmer, who has been in business since his graduation, will be working with "... key individuals and corporations who have the ability to make a major impact upon the financial support of the college," according to Doug Mason, vice president for advancement.

Moeller will be working closely with the more than 11,000 alumni of the college plus other friends.

In the admissions area, Katko, a 1986 Simpson College graduate, will be a counselor in Central and Southeast Iowa

Dakota and Colorado.

Zellmer, who most recently was executive vice president of a real estate development firm in Bloomington, Minn., personally made a major impact upon the endowment portion of the recently completed Wartburg Design for Tomorrow program. In 1978, he made a Challenge Pledge of $500,000 toward the endowment, causing officials of the DFT program to raise the endowment goal from $850,000 to $5 million.

He returned to Wartburg from Gill & Associates, Bloomington, Minn., where he also was project manager of a time-share project.

Since graduating from Wartburg, he has worked for Variety Supply Co., Clara City, Minn.; Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Chicago; DeSoto, Inc., Des Plaines, Ill.; and Sears.

Moeller has been a news and feature writer and photographer for the Waverly Newspapers for the past 10 years. Prior to returning to Waverly in 1974, she taught high school English and journal-

Kerry, 13, and Andrew, 9.

Olson returns to Wartburg from Luther Point Bible Camp, Grantsburg, Wis., where she was program director.

While in college, she was a resident assistant, president of the Campus Ministry Board, a member of the CLM outreach team and a member of the Chapel Choir.

Vander Werf

Hafermann

Vander Werf, who graduated from the Hawkeye Institute of Technology, Waterloo, Iowa, in May, worked for 10 years at Deere and Co., Waterloo, before returning to school.

He has been a free lance photographer and includes among his credits work for the Black Hawk County Food Bank and the Waterloo Arts Council as well as work for private individuals.

Hafermann, who is teaching one course during both the Fall and Winter Terms through the religion department, has been acting headmaster of the Junior Seminary of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Tanzania, a secondary school with more than 230 students.

He has been there since 1972 and during this time has also served as a translator at the Lutheran World Federation (LWF) General Assembly in Dar es Salaam and at a seminar on Women and Development conducted by LWF in Arusha, Tanzania.

He also has been a district pastor in Tanzania, first in a rural Muslim area and then in a large urban congregation in Dar es Salaam. He served as president of the Eastern and Coastal District of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Tanzania.

During his year at Wartburg, his wife, Kirsten, will be completing a degree in Christian education.

and will advise the admissions department's Tour Guides/Ambassadors program. Hertel, who is a half-time counselor, will work in North Central Iowa, and Olson will cover Northwest Iowa and work some markets in Nebraska, South ism in Nevada, Iowa, and Neenah, Wis.

She is married to Dr. V. Richard Moeller '67, a Waverly veterinarian, and they have three sons, Andrew, 14; Paul, 11; and Stephen, 9.

Katko graduated from Simpson with majors in theatre arts and public relations, worked in the college's admissions department and served as an ambassador. She also played softball, served as a cheerleader and was a member of a sorority at Simpson.

Hertel has been associated with the college as an adviser to its cheerleaders.

She is married to Gary Hertel '70, who is with Century Companies of America in Waverly, and they have two children,

College meets challenge for three grants

Wartburg's development department has fulfilled requirements for three challenge grants made to the college in recent years.

One of the grants benefits endowment, another the academic computing program of the college and the third completes a scholarship program for minority students in the Waterloo, Iowa, area.

The first is the Lutheran Brotherhood Endowment Challenge of $200,000; the second is the Iowa College Foundation (ICF) Computer Challenge totaling more than $40,000; and the third is the R.J. McElroy Trust Challenge Grant for minority student scholarships of $100,000.

The final installment of the Lutheran Brotherhood Endowment Challenge amounted to $97,655.

The grant matched on a $1 to $2 basis money received for the college's endowment from donors, 75 percent of whom had to be new. This means that, in addition to the money from Lutheran Brotherhood, the college had to raise $400,000 from its constituency for the endowment under this program.

Lutheran Brotherhood also announced

Wartburg was receiving a check for $7,888 for the second quarter of this year from its program entitled Inviting Member Colleges and Theological Seminaries (IMPACT). This brings to $233,737 the total received by the college from IMPACT since it was started in 1979.

IMPACT matches, on a percentage basis, Lutheran Brotherhood members' gifts to the college of $25 to $100 per year.

The ICF grant was completed when a special mailing and gifts from alumni who work for Hewlett-Packard and the company itself raised some $26,741. Wartburg's share from ICF, on a $1 for $2 basis, was $13,368.60, which was determined on full-time enrollment totals in September 1985.

Funds from the program will be used to assist in purchasing hardware and software which will make the college's computer accessible to students from their residence halls.

The McElroy scholarship challenge was for $100,000, half to be used to endow scholarships for minority students from Waterloo and the other half to endow the McElroy Communication Arts and Business Scholarships, which previously had been funded on an annual basis rather than endowed.

According to Doug Mason, vice president for advancement, the college has secured $50,253 to put the minority scholarship fund in place.

High schools in the Waterloo metropolitan area will be asked annually to recommend for the scholarship one minority student who will be attending Wartburg.

Language study lauded

The foreign language program at Wartburg has received exceptionally high marks in a survey of U.S. students studying abroad.

The survey was conducted as an interview project by the Rev. Kurt Reichert, assistant to the director for Support Services and Communications of the National Lutheran Campus Ministry.

The students surveyed were either U.S. Lutheran students or students studying abroad under the auspices of Lutheran colleges. The project covered students studying in France, Germany, Spain and Austria.

Reichert reported that, "The quality of various programs varied widely. Some (including those offered through Wartburg College, the University of California system, the University of Wisconsin-Madison and Northern Illinois University) get gold stars.

"Clearly one of the best programs available is that designed by Wartburg College where one month of the freshman year is spent in the country where they (students) will spend their junior year."

Reichert was most impressed with the ability of Wartburg students to handle their second language. He said they do not find it difficult to form friendships with those whose native tongue is not English.

Hampton cited for leadership

Dr. David Hampton, professor and chair of Wartburg's chemistry department, has been cited for extraordinary educational leadership by The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and The American Association for Higher Education and its publication, Change Magazine.

Hampton, who is in his 25th year at Wartburg, was nominated by the college administration as one of those faculty members "making a difference," according to Kenneth E. Eble, author of the article, "Celebrating Faculty Commitment."

Hampton

This is the first time Change, which recognizes quality activities in higher education and deals with trends and innovations in teaching, has made this type of recognition.

During the past two years, Hampton has been a member of the Consultant/Evaluator Corps for the North Central Association (NCA) and has co-authored review reports for Heidelberg College, Tiffin, Ohio, Research College of Nursing at Rockhurst College, Kansas City, Mo., and Beth-El College of Nursing and was a member of the NCA Review Reading Panel for Hannibal-LaGrange College, Hannibal, Mo.

Hampton is a 1956 graduate of St. Olaf College, Northfield, Minn., and has his M.S. degree from the University of North Dakota and his Ph.D. degree from Purdue University.

Robert R. Buckmaster

A Turkey-hunting Philanthropist

By Linda Kettner

The gobbling was perceptible, but barely. Sitting motionless under the tree, shotguns ready, we hoped this was it. It was 11 a.m. and for six hours we had tromped the wooded hills and valleys of Robert Buckmaster's land in Allamakee County in Northeast Iowa in search of the most elusive of birds, the wildest of them all—the Iowa wild turkey.

In the woods by dawn, we had listened intently and followed a couple false gobbles, then had found a tree to sit under, overlooking a large clearing. Buckmaster stuck the decoy on the edge of the clearing, then returned to the tree, where our camouflage-clad bodies began their vigil, flush to the trunk, motionless. It had rained all night and the ground and bushes were wet. My fatigues stuck to my skin, and my toes squished within teal-blue tennis shoes.

A student of turkey calling, Buckmaster began to use intermittently three of the five different calls he always carries to tantalize a turkey: the "yelp," the "cluck" and the "whine," sounds created by various instruments. He has spent hours listening to his turkey calling tapes, and he sounds for all the world like a hen capable of driving a wild turkey wild. The calls are too sophisticated for a novice to even try, let alone master, the reporter is informed.

Ideally, Buckmaster had explained earlier, you try to be in the woods at dawn and pray that you get as close as possible to a tree in which a turkey is roosting. When the gobbler hears the calls, he arises, bails out of his tree and follows the calls, gobbling out to the would-be hen. The turkey expects his gobbling to draw the hen to him, but when she doesn't appear, "finally the sex urge gets him" and he goes to her, or in this case, the hunters.

Even if you become a master mimic of turkey talk, you're not home free until you learn the nuances. Romance among turkeys apparently is as complex as among humans. Explains Buckmaster: "If you hear one gobbling, then you make a call. If he answers, you call again. Then you play hard to get. You don't call every time he gobbles." (Sound familiar?)

But the sun was now above the horizon, and the turkeys were done roosting. We'd have to get our turkey from among those who were already up and roaming around.

After several minutes of serious calling, the first turkey appeared at 7 a.m., about 100 yards from our tree, too far away to shoot at. I made a "there's a turkey!" face and eagerly pointed at it, amazed and delighted that there in plain sight, albeit far off, was our prey. But my movement scared the gobbler, which took off at high speed into the bush. The master hunter was not amused; he was silent and his eyes grew small.

I knew what he was thinking: Any turkey hunter worth her salt knows that wild turkeys can see and hear better than anything in the wild. You don't point at one when it appears, even if it is a football field away.

"A deer thinks every man is a stump, and a turkey thinks every stump is a man," Buckmaster had earlier explained from behind the greenish-brown net covering his face, as he emphasized the importance of sitting still and not talking. "They are very wary, naturally cautious and particularly so where they're hunted. They have an intelligence for survival."

But even ace African bird hunters like Buckmaster, who stalks his turkeys with a passion akin to "the old man and the sea" angling marlins, can blow opportunities.

Not ten minutes later, tree-look-alike outfits in place, calculated breathing the only movement, Buckmaster couldn't restrain himself any longer; a chain-smoker, he reached for a cigarette, pulled it out of his pocket, and lit it.

From behind us arose such a clatter... A gobbler, which had walked within 10 yards of the tree, went crazy, spreading its wings, running like mad and scaring the living daylights out of both hunters, veteran and tyro. We were even.

That's how the morning had gone. Zero for two. Since then it had been trudging over many of the 1,600 acres that make up Buckmaster's four farms, purchased by him to provide the ultimate in hunting during Iowa's four spring turkey hunting seasons, which follow directly on the heels of Alabama's turkey seasons. He has a farm in Alabama too, on which roam many wild turkeys and Buckmaster himself during the winter months. He and his wife spend summer and autumn at their home on a Wisconsin lake.

Carrying his 10-gauge automatic, Buckmaster, 73, who had a hip operation last spring, had no problem charging up one hill and down the next, always in search of a tree worthy under which to lurk, no tree being worthy for seemingly more than 10 minutes. He toyed with the idea of sitting in the blind he and his son had built, but it was apparently too confining. I mostly drew up the rear, toting a Baretta, an Italian-made, petite shotgun and dragging the decoy, a life-size, stunning paper mache hen, delectably painted to lure the most standoffish of gobblers.

Now 11 a.m., we both knew that time was running out. The law allows no turkey hunting in the afternoon. It was now or never, and the gobbling was finally getting louder. Buckmaster coolly nodded for me to aim. I poised my Baretta, figuring I would have one shot as the turkey strolled over the ridge. I tried not to recall that the only gun I had ever shot was my brother's BB gun; the only game I had ever stalked was barn sparrows, which sat dully on the electrical wires of my grandfather's farm, never flinching as BBs whizzed by. All I needed to do was point the gun at the turkey when it appeared and squeeze the trigger. In my excitement, I wouldn't even feel the gun kick, the master hunter promised.

We waited. And waited. The gobbles crescendoed but finally faded. No turkey today. Not even a shot at one. The feeling was disappointment, frustration. I now understood why a hunter hunts: challenge, a desire to win, but also the solitude of the forest, the freedom of unpeopled outdoors, the incredible beauty of a Northeast Iowa morning after it rains, the simple majesty of undefiled land.

Perhaps if we had sat under the same tree all morning, where we had seen the first two turkeys, I asked. If we wouldn't have walked all over creation, muffling leaves, snapping sticks, then maybe we would have bagged a bird. "Maybe," he responded.

I left, thinking "next year," but Buckmaster stayed out for another week until he bagged one. It was just a yearling, he reported later, but it edged his all-time turkey tally up to 29 birds in 10 years.

A tenacious turkey hunter, Buckmaster goes after most things he wants with a similar zeal and determination to win. He is a man to have on your side, and Wartburg College has been so lucky.

Buckmaster goes after things he wants with zeal and determination.

His personal financial contributions to the college and his ability to convince corporate leaders and other major donors to commit to Wartburg has literally meant millions of dollars for The Design for Tomorrow campaign, the 10-year fundraising program that has raised $21 million for the college in cash, pledges and deferred gifts.

Wartburg gave Buckmaster an honorary Doctor of Laws degree in 1970, and thereafter he felt "obligated" to start getting involved with the college. At the time, he was chairman of Black Hawk Broadcasting Co. in Waterloo and had been a highly successful trial lawyer for 30 years as a member of the Waterloo firm of Beecher Buckmaster Beecher Holms and Lindeman.

Although he was raised in nearby Dunkerton, the son of a country doctor, and had attended college at neighboring University of Northern Iowa, he knew virtually nothing about Wartburg College, 20 miles up the road, he says.

Six months after receiving the honorary degree, he was named to the Wartburg Board of Regents during the John Bachman administration and began his distinguished 12-year tenure of "making a difference" for the college in the leadership and fund-raising arenas.

His first major involvement with the college came shortly after being named to the board. Because of his considerable experience as a mediator between the black and white communities in Waterloo during the race riots of the 1960s, President Bachman called on Buckmaster to help ease racial tensions at Wartburg. "I spent every night for a week with the black students at Wartburg," he says.

He subsequently was named to the Wartburg board's executive committee, started learning more about the college, and "came to have a tremendous respect for Wartburg."

President William Jellema was selected to replace Bachman, who had resigned, and shortly thereafter Buckmaster became involved in The Design for Tomorrow. "Jellema and I took the time to start telling people in Waterloo about Wartburg. It was time consuming, but it worked."

Prior to those days, Wartburg was only known well among its Lutheran church constituency, Buckmaster says. The goal was now to make the college well-known in the neighboring metropolitan community of Waterloo and Cedar Falls as well.

In the 1960s, a UNI professor conducted a research project to examine the power structure of Waterloo. Buckmaster emerged as an undisputed leader among a handful of men who ran the city. Such powerful connections benefited Wartburg. He started calling in favors, this time for the college. "Other people have things they want your help on; you help them. Then they help you with your things..."

Principal among the companies he introduced to Wartburg was Deere & Co., both its Waterloo operations and corporate headquarters in Moline, Ill. Consequently, Deere has committed more than a half million dollars over the past 10 years to The Design for Tomorrow campaign.

Buckmaster believes that Wartburg is a producer of what many corporations and businesses are looking for: prospective employees who have excellent value systems and aren't afraid to work hard.

"Wartburg has the greatest raw material in the world," he observes. "These are kids off the farms and from the Midwest who know there isn't any such thing as a free lunch."

Buckmaster, a small town boy himself, grew up with similar values, he says.

ROD VANDER WERF

"I worked hard, saved my money invested it in my business and was lucky."

When Buckmaster and some associates bought Black Hawk Broadcasting Co. in 1965, the television station was clearly inferior to the competition. However, by the time it was sold 15 years later, it was a giant in the industry, monopolizing its broadcast market.

A secret of success for him has been "taking a lot of time off," he says. "You don't have to go other places necessarily. You can hunt right here, for example, and I always did that before I had money. I worked just harder than hell when I was working, but then I'd get away from it."

Consequently, retirement has been an easy adjustment, he says, since he has always known how to relax and to cultivate his avocations as well as his vocations.

On May 8, 1984, Wartburg President

'Wartburg has the greatest raw material in the world.'

Robert Vogel hosted Robert Buckmaster Recognition Day in honor of Buckmaster's contributions to the college. Present in addition to his wife of 50 years, Grace, and their three grown children, was a host of luminaries who are proud to call Buckmaster their friend. Highlight of the day was the official christening of an elegant lecture hall in the new Whitehouse Business Center known as "The Buckmaster Room." The room, modeled after lecture rooms at the Harvard School of Business, comfortably seats 90 in tilting chairs on four ascending tiers and features wood ceiling, oak furnishings and burgundy carpeting and accessories.

Buckmaster chairs the board of trustees of the McElroy Trust, which currently has $25 million in assets. The trust awards funds to college students and colleges throughout Northeast Iowa. One of the first major gifts from the trust was to fund the R. J. McElroy Chair in Communication Arts at Wartburg. The trust also endows two major scholarships at the college, one for communication arts and business majors and the other for minority students from Black Hawk County.

A premier trout and salmon fisherman, he is president of the American Museum of Fly Fishers, whose headquarters are located in Manchester, Vt., and he is founder of the Iowa Natural Heritage Foundation and still chairs its long-range planning committee. Several years ago, Buckmaster, Carl Bluedorn, another major Wartburg benefactor, and Dick Young, all of Waterloo, bought the abandoned railroad bed between Cedar Rapids and Waterloo, developing it into the Cedar Valley Nature Trail, the only bike trail in the country to connect two major cities.

He loves nature and his conservation projects with a passion, almost as much as he loves hunting turkeys and fishing for salmon, which take priority over almost anything. He recently returned from fishing for Atlantic Ocean salmon in Iceland and says convincingly, "Atlantic salmon is the greatest fish in the world!" And, he adds, it feels almost as good to catch one as it does to shoot a wild turkey.

It is time!

It is time to celebrate. Gift income to Wartburg College in fiscal 1985-86 was the highest in college history. If you could write the script for a 10-year fund-raising effort like the Design for Tomorrow, you would want the last year to be the best of all. And that is just how it was. In recognizing the college's achievements during this past year, we are saluting the capstone to a 10-year effort. And that calls for a celebration, a time to call to mind again the growth and development of Wartburg College over the past decade.

It is time to give thanks. So many people have had a part in the college's successes: faculty, staff and students; board, alumni and friends. All deserve a special measure of thanks. Each person named in this report is a partner in the college's mission in Christian higher education. Above all, we thank God, and the people of God, whose prayers, encouragement and participation hold Wartburg faithful to its calling.

It is time to make another bold leap forward. Nothing is more important to the future of our nation and world than the education of people, particularly young people. In preparing students for lives of leadership and service, what place does it better than Wartburg College? Wartburg's success in 1985-86, or in the past decade, is not the end of a story nor its climax. There are new chapters to be written. The challenges before us are as tough as any the college has faced in the past. This is not a time for weak resolve or halfway efforts. It is a time for renewed vigor, commitment and support. We stand on the shoulders of those who have gone before us. We reach out to the future with hope and vision. We trust God for wisdom, courage and strength.

Robert Vogel
President, Wartburg College

ALUMNI

The conclusion of the Design for Tomorrow program marked the end of a decade in which the number of alumni gifts and amount of alumni support reached record levels. The 1985-86 fiscal year was a good year for alumni support. Twenty-four and one-half percent of our 11,696 alumni assisted the college financially, which is the second best year in the college's history.

A STORY OF SUCCESS

The Wartburg Design for Tomorrow

On May 30, the $20,000 commitment of Fritz and Nancie Steinhauer put Phase III of the Wartburg Design for Tomorrow program over the top and brought to a successful completion the college's 10-year effort to raise needed funds for current operations, capital projects and the endowment.

When all the gifts were recorded, cash and commitments to the Design for Tomorrow totalled more than $21 million. Thanks be to God!

When the Design for Tomorrow was launched on Oct. 9, 1976, some believed the $12 million goal was unrealistic. But President William Jellema and the Board of Regents, chaired by Robert Ruisch, took the bold step, trusting alumni and friends of the college to rally to its support, not only for the 1970s but for the 1980s and beyond.

The Design for Tomorrow would be conducted in three phases over 10 years. The $4.1 million goal for Phase I was surpassed in just 27 months. The major capital project of that phase, the Physical Education Complex, was actually dedicated in October 1978, only two years after the launch of the campaign.

Phase II was launched in 1979 with a goal of $4.3 million. The goal was met within three years. Capital funds provided the new Whitehouse Business Center and the addition of a Visitors Center and bookstore. During Phase II, in 1980, President Robert Vogel succeeded Jellema as the 14th president of Wartburg.

Adverse economic conditions in Iowa and the Midwest delayed the launch of Phase III until the fall of 1983. The Phase III goal of $4.5 million included the renovation of Old Main and major campus improvements. The Steinhauer gift, given in May of this year, brought Phase III and the 10-year campaign to its successful completion.

Other significant projects funded by the campaign include a substantial introduction of computer capability for both academic and administrative applications, scholarships and student loans, campus signage and Student Union renovations, including Buhr Lounge, the Den, and the Dining Hall.

Initially the $12 million Design for Tomorrow goal included a doubling of the endowment, which stood at $850,000 in 1976. Actually the endowment more than tripled during the campaign. A challenge by Wartburg alumnus Kenton L. Zellmer, early in Phase I, provided the incentive. As a result, the college's endowment today is $2.82 million with more than $6 million additional in documented deferred commitments.

In appreciation to all who participated in the Design for Tomorrow, a Book of Remembrance, listing all donors, has been created. The book is on display in the Presidents Room of Old Main.

The Wartburg Design for Tomorrow was People

- Donors, 7,788 of them, including alumni, parents of current and past students, friends, foundations, corporations and churches
- Volunteers, some 2,758 of them, helping plan, host, and do follow-up calls to people who attended 156 dinners in 71 geographic areas across the country
- Waverly people, who contributed $3,355,264 during the three phases, including $742,378 given by the Wartburg College faculty and staff
- Waterloo/Cedar Falls alumni and friends, who contributed $3,194,566 during the three phases
- Minneapolis/St. Paul and Chicago area alumni and friends, who contributed $503,161 and $434,144 respectively during the three phases
- Heritage Club members, Wartburg supporters who have remembered the college through planned gifts such as wills, annuities, or trusts, and who numbered 60 in 1977 but were 451 strong by 1986
- Alumni challengers, 13 Wartburg alumni families, who pledged $150,000 in 1984 to challenge other alumni to give more to the college through new and increased gifts. The initial goal was met in nine months and more than $300,000 in new support was realized.

The Physical Education Center, the major Phase I project, serves both the Wartburg and Waverly communities. Nearly 90 percent of Wartburg's students participate in the center's activities. In 1985, the college won the Iowa Governor's Council for Physical Fitness Award in recognition of some 1,200 community people who participated in sponsored activities.

The P.E. Center has a 10th mile track and a multi-purpose arena which can be converted into five tennis courts or four basketball courts. It is used for volleyball, badminton, indoor track, as well as for baseball, softball and golf practice. The three handball or racquetball courts, plus a squash court, make this one of the most outstanding physical education facilities in the Midwest.

The new college bookstore, a light, airy and accessible facility, has been featured in national publications.

Keeping Wartburg affordable was an increasing challenge during the decade of the Design for Tomorrow. Annually funded and endowed scholarships totaled $1,166,326 as donors responded to the needs of deserving students. The Century Companies of America gift endows top Regents scholarships and upperclass scholarships in math and computer science.

The Wartburg Design for Tomorrow It was More than Dollars or Bricks and Mortar . . .

By President Robert L. Vogel

A host of good things have happened at Wartburg College in the past decade because of Design for Tomorrow, benefits which might not appear at first glance to be related to the campaign itself.

Alumni program

The campaign provided the most effective alumni program in the college's history. The president and representatives of the college met with alumni on 156 occasions in more than 70 geographical areas. The events provided an opportunity to keep alumni informed about the college and rally support for its efforts. There has been a surge of "Wartburg Pride." The campaign gave Wartburg momentum, spreading enthusiasm among alumni.

Public recognition

Wartburg College has been far too modest in telling its story. Through the Design for Tomorrow program, with its events and films, the college has won new respect and new friends. The press releases, the Wartburg Magazine and all publications over the last 10 years, telling of one accomplished goal after another, have communicated the message that good things are happening at Wartburg. And they are.

Enrollment success

It is not coincidental that Wartburg has had five consecutive years of enrollment increases. Few schools anywhere can match that record. Prospective students and their parents were included in area events early in Phase II. These events and

"The Design for Tomorrow has established a base for the future."

the new resources which the campaign provided, both in facilities and program, have given Wartburg the edge.

But we have a dilemma. When we want to show people the strength and quality of Wartburg, we tend to show them our campus and our facilities. It is so difficult to show people the quality of a faculty, academic program or campus community. How do you convey the Wartburg spirit, that special attention from faculty, the rigor of the place, or the life-long friendships which are developed here?

So we point to brick and mortar and the beautiful landscaping, visible and outward signs of a substantial and meaningful growth in every aspect of Wartburg's life. Quite apart from new facilities and campus beautification, evidence abounds to the growth at Wartburg over the past decade:

Quality of Students

- The average ACT score of freshmen has reached 23.4. The national average is 18.8.
- Wartburg College enrolls a higher percentage of State of Iowa Scholars than any other college or university in the state and has for years. These are the top Iowa high school graduates.
- The Class of 1986 had a National Science Foundation Fellowship winner and a Fulbright Scholar.

Placement of Graduates

- Since 1979, 95 percent of Wartburg graduates have obtained jobs or entered graduate school within seven months of commencement.
- 96 percent of the Class of 1985 was either employed or in graduate school by December 1985. (The Class of 1986 is now being surveyed.)
- Over the past 10 years, Wartburg College premedical students have the highest acceptance rate into medical schools of any school in Iowa.
- Every music therapy major in the history of the program (10 years) has been placed in a music therapy position.
- Social work majors, almost without exception, receive a full-year advance placement toward an MSW at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.
- The placement record for majors in education, accounting and other pre-professional programs is equally noteworthy.

Recognition of Quality

- Wartburg College is one of only 302 colleges and universities included in Peterson's Competitive Colleges, a list of the most competitive schools in the country. Wartburg has been included for the past three years.
- The college is one of only 220 colleges or universities included in the most recent issue of The Best Buys in College Education, edited by the education editor of The New York Times.
- The Wartburg Choir has won national and international acclaim and will sing again at the National Choral Directors Convention in San Antonio, Texas, in 1987.

Perhaps the greatest legacy from the Design for Tomorrow is an enthusiastic spirit of hope and expectation—a new vision for the college. Wartburg people, wherever they may be today, have a strong feeling that “we’re not done yet.”

The Design for Tomorrow has established a base for the future. It has engendered within each of us a renewed commitment. We are persuaded that these are days of opportunity for Wartburg College. Each of us has a part in helping Wartburg to be all that “God calls it to be” for each succeeding generation.

The Presidents Room in Old Main features portraits of all past presidents of the college and will be used as a seminar and board room. Built in 1880, Old Main is on the National Register of Historic Sites.

Campus beautification was an objective of Phase III. A garden area around Old Main, a new sidewalk system, signage, the Victory Bell plaza (featuring the bell from the Clinton campus) and campus directories—all enhance Wartburg's physical appearance.

HERITAGE CLUB

The Heritage Club experienced another positive year in its growth. Fifty-six new members brings the total membership to 451.

The Heritage Club has been instrumental in helping the college's endowment triple in the past ten years. The college's endowment has reached a level of $2,402,250 in cash and approximately $7.5 million in expectancies.

Qualifying for membership in the Heritage Club requires informing the college of having provided for a future gift to Wartburg through a will, trust, annuity, insurance policy, or having established a restricted endowment.

The ninth annual meeting of the Heritage Club was held on May 23 with 104 members in attendance.

Meyer focuses on youth sports and their associated problems

By Scott Leisinger '86

There has been a proliferation of youth sports programs in recent years, and attendant with that growth have come a number of problems.

One person who has been associated with youth sports for some time and is familiar with youth programs, their problems and solutions is Kathy Meyer, assistant professor of physical education and head women's volleyball and basketball coach at Wartburg.

"I've been involved with athletics and young kids for some time, first as a participant and then as an instructor," Meyer said. "During college, I spent my summers in Mayville, N.D., teaching swimming lessons to the children of migrant Mexican-American workers.

"We taught them the fundamental skills," Meyer added. "Most were between the ages of 6 and 12. Those are the ages where kids learn how to incorporate physical growth with a specific skill and to combine social and mental skills into a game atmosphere. Watching kids put all that together was very satisfying."

Meyer, who came to Wartburg in 1981 after earning a master's degree in health, physical education and recreation from South Dakota State University, has seen some dramatic changes in youth sports over the years. But while the programs are getting ever larger, their basic concept has remained the same.

"Participation is still the key," she said. "Individual development of the child is the goal, not necessarily winning. Each child should get to participate in all phases of the sport."

Although winning is supposed to be secondary, occasionally reports are heard of troubled situations where coaches may be unqualified to work with youth or may overstress the importance of winning.

"The majority of youth sport coaches and leaders are doing a very good job. Many are volunteers who have devoted years of service, but we can all stand some improvement," Meyer said. "The criterion for a successful program is that coaches and parents have the child's best interests in mind.

"Youth sport organizations are trying to establish guidelines to insure effective programs, and they're also organizing coaching clinics and distributing films and educational materials to coaches in an effort to make sure youth sport leaders are well qualified," she added. "Recently, there has been immense improvement in the quality of youth sport programs."

Sometimes problems occur when a disagreement arises between a coach and parent, but Meyer said that good communication is the best preventive medicine.

"Problems occur when the parent, coach and child all have conflicting goals," she said. "Coaches and parents should keep a good relationship. They should discuss beforehand the program, its goals and the means by which those goals will be accomplished. Communication is the key."

Parents may sometimes wonder how hard to push a child into sports or how active they should become in their child's programs.

"Parents must remember to keep their child's interests number one," Meyer said. "Parents should be supportive, encourage their children to participate in a variety of sports, take an active interest in the sports and become informed about the programs."

Meyer said parents should check to see that the coach's main concern is with the child's welfare. However, she added that parents should remember that some difficult decisions will always have to be made by the coach, and, for that reason, there's always possibility for coach-parent conflicts.

However, despite some problems in youth sports today, Meyer said most programs are solidly based.

"You only seem to hear about the negative situations," she said, "but the wide majority of programs are beneficial.

"Youth sports are a great idea. They provide a child with the chance to develop individually while also learning how to get along and work with others," Meyer said. "Youth programs offer kids an opportunity for leadership roles, and they also give them a chance to follow directions."

Since coming to Wartburg, Meyer has helped many of her students become interested and involved in youth sport programs, and she believes the college definitely has a role in the youth sports movement.

"Full-time coaches and educators need to maintain close professional contacts with youth sport directors and help out in any way they can to add to the effectiveness of the program," Meyer said.

"Wartburg students have helped coach in various area programs, and the Waverly Parks and Recreation Department uses numerous Wartburg students to help instruct several of the youth classes offered," she added. "Several students have helped organize the Hershey's youth track and field competition and also have assisted with the Iowa Special Olympics program."

One program is the Wartburg soccer team's Saturday morning youth clinics. The players are conducting a series of weekend clinics for local youngsters, and the program will culminate with a youth soccer game at halftime of a Wartburg varsity match.

"There are so many activities available for kids today," Meyer said. "In fact, with all the emphasis on youth sports, art and music programs may be suffering. Youth sports are important, but we need to keep them in their proper perspective."

Meyer concluded the main task of youth sports organizers is to keep the programs enjoyable.

"We shouldn't worry so much about the competition and winning and losing," she said. "Youth sports shouldn't involve pressure. They should be a place where kids can get together and participate, have fun and grow individually."

Canfield's goal: To be a positive influence

By Scott Leisinger '86

Though he is the winningest football coach in Wartburg College history, Don Canfield isn't that impressed with his achievement.

"Don't get me wrong. I love to win," he says. "The verdict of the scoreboard is very real, yet personally I don't think it tells the whole story of individual and team production."

Canfield, who is in his 14th season at Wartburg, believes that each individual has an internal and external challenge to do one's best each day, no matter what the occupation.

"My goal at Wartburg isn't to accumulate wins, although you do have to win enough to stay in coaching," he said. "My goal is to be a positive influence."

"We stress winning, but we stress other things much more. We use football as an example of giving 100 percent of one's self—physically, emotionally and mentally—to the cause, whatever that might be."

"We teach our players to recognize the team comes first and to be supportive of their teammates. We want them to enjoy playing football and to gain satisfaction from the camaraderie of the other players."

Canfield, a native of St. Peter, Minn., says he always wanted to be a teacher and coach. He was a member of the "south end gang," as he called his friends, a group of seven or eight youngsters who spent most of their time playing football.

As a senior at St. Peter High, his football team went 9-0, not bad for a squad which was predicted to go winless. Don Miller was the coach of that team, and he made a lasting impression on his former player.

"I've always had a driving love for athletics," Canfield says, "and I was influenced so much by my high school coaches that I wanted to be a coach myself, so I could emulate them."

Following high school, Canfield earned his bachelor's degree at St. Olaf College in nearby Northfield, Minn., and in 1968 received his master's degree from St. Cloud State, also in Minnesota.

He coached in the high school ranks for six years, including four seasons at Storm Lake, Iowa, where he notched an impressive 34-13-2 record. He then was assistant coach at Valparaiso University in Indiana for three years before assuming the head coaching job at Wartburg in 1973.

Since coming to Wartburg, he has completed a doctorate at Northern Colorado (1980).

He says he has been happy with his career choice.

"The rewards in coaching on this level are not monetary. Coaches and educators are always confronted with the question of whether they're providing well enough for their families."

"The elements that keep me in coaching are the close and unique contacts a coach has with his players and the flow of adrenaline that comes when preparing for a contest."

Canfield admits he has moderate ambitions to move up and coach at a larger school, but he says the move would be purely from a financial standpoint, since he doubts that he could enjoy any college more than Wartburg.

"I believe firmly that the Wartburg setting is best suited for a quality education. We have an inordinate number of dedicated, qualified educators," he says.

"I've always wanted to coach at a small, liberal arts, church-related college, such as Wartburg. The entire Wartburg experience is enveloped in a Christian atmosphere."

Canfield makes a point of communicating his values to his players.

"In football, it's not possibility and potential that count; it's production and performance and this same principle applies to life. On the field, we talk about 100 percent production as an athlete, but we teach our players to be a credit to themselves and to the school, academically and socially as well as athletically."

Because of their coach's ideals, Wartburg football players view Canfield with respect.

ROD VANDER WERF

MUTUAL RESPECT—Wartburg football coach Don Canfield treats his players with respect, and they return the favor. Canfield believes it is important to communicate his values to the players and seeks 100 percent production from the student-athletes. However, he wants them to have fun while playing. They, in turn, say he is not only a sound, fundamental coach but also a good friend.

"He's a fine fundamental coach, but he's also a good friend," senior tailback Carl Montgomery of Waterloo, Iowa, an All Iowa Conference selection as a freshman, says.

Canfield relishes the camaraderie that has abounded among every team he's coached.

"Our men have fun playing football, and they enjoy their fellow players," he says. "Some things can be learned on the field which cannot be learned in the classroom. That's the beauty of a liberal arts education. You get to participate in so many things."

'In football, it's not possibility and potential that count; it's production and performance, and this same principle applies to life.'

There are some aspects of football that bother Canfield, however.

"Athletes must realize we live in a materialistic generation, plagued with a playboy philosophy and a drug orientation," he says. "These things are a drag on humans and keep them from developing their full potential."

"I'm having a harder time dealing with injuries. I know how much time and effort the young men put into the game, only to be thwarted by an injury."

"I'm also disturbed when I see parents and players establish their identities as humans on the basis of their athletic prowess. That's wrong."

Another concern is the pressure induced by athletics.

"There's a great deal of internal pressure placed on coaches these days, even on this level," he says. "Your product is put before the public for scrutiny every Saturday in a highly competitive environment where half the teams must lose."

Canfield admits there may be a time when he'll have to consider getting out of coaching.

"Woody Hayes said that coaches must do two things. First, they should take more guidance and counseling courses, and second, they must prepare for the time when they get out of coaching. I hope I follow that advice better than Woody did himself."

ROD VANDER WERF

STRATEGY—Don Canfield confers with assistant coach Bob Nielson '81, who handles the offensive line for the Knights. Canfield says one of the things he most enjoys about coaching is the preparation for the coming Saturday afternoon. Nielson, who also is in the admissions department and coordinates all athletic recruiting, is one of seven assistants on this year's staff, including two students and three part-timers.

The change would allow Canfield to spend more time with his wife, Jeanne, and his two children, Amy and Mark.

"I love the association I have with my family and friends," he says.

Canfield also likes to dabble in real estate. He has taken over a number of properties in Waverly and has renovated them, and he'd like to continue in that endeavor after leaving coaching.

In his spare time, Canfield is active in his church, serving as a Sunday School teacher, on the endowment board of the Bartels Lutheran Home for the Aged and on his church council.

"I enjoy being involved in worthwhile activities," he says. "A minister friend once told me, 'If you're too busy for your church, then you're too busy.'"

Canfield is on a constant search for excellence, continually striving to improve.

"I can always do better because I'm just an individual, and I coach my own personality. Although I've studied the greats, such as Vince Lombardi and Bear Bryant, I think it's important that Canfield coaches as Canfield."

That style has produced a 69-49-1 record in 13 years at Wartburg, 36-11 over the past five years.

"I've tried to do the best job I'm capable of," he says. "In terms of my effectiveness, I guess that judgment will have to be left to others."

Thanks to Dr. Hein, more Iowa babies survive

By Elaine Main

Running and toddling across Iowa are 5,000 youngsters who might not have survived had they been born a decade ago.

They can thank Dr. Herman A. Hein '59, a University of Iowa pediatrician in Iowa City. He created Iowa's Statewide Perinatal Care Program 13 years ago. Since then, fewer Iowa infants have died—5,000 fewer, according to the state's death rate.

"The past two years, Iowa boasts the lowest mortality rate for states delivering as many or more babies," Hein said.

Iowa was one of the first to regionalize perinatal health care, and today no other state is better organized.

Eleven Iowa hospitals have become regional centers. Smaller hospitals speed problem births and high risk newborns to these hospitals. Likewise, the regional hospitals have the assurance that they can refer their problem cases to the University of Iowa Hospital in Iowa City, where highly specialized personnel and equipment stand ready to offer aid.

This simple referral system is vulnerable to tangles from hospital personnel and physicians. They feel attached to patients and could hesitate to refer them elsewhere. They also recognize the economy of keeping patients in hospitals close to home.

Hein did two things to avoid the tangle. He took a team of professionals to each of Iowa's 140 hospitals. They learned how hospital personnel handled births and newborns, and they offered tips. Hospitals acted on those tips, and only a year later they lowered infant mortality rates.

The second thing he did was sandwich into each visit the question, "Where do you refer problem cases?" Those answers provided the raw data Hein needed to decide which hospitals were the "naturals" that should be beefed up into regional perinatal care centers.

"Competition and jealousy could have blocked acceptance of the regional centers," Hein admitted. "It was important to choose sites that were already receiving a lot of referrals. It meant Iowa didn't have to legislate into existence its levels of infant health care."

That compliments Hein's skill at working with people.

"Much of my work involves educating

No one is more interested in peacefully sleeping infants than Dr. Herman A. Hein. His life-saving idea of regionalized perinatal health care is waking up the nation and European countries.

professionals about infant health. To remain credible, I still practice. I set aside two months for heading the University Hospital's infant intensive care unit. I love it. I am a physician first."

Second, Hein teaches, something he began as a teaching assistant in Professor Alfred Swensen's Wartburg classes.

Third, he administrates. In addition to perinatal care, he heads two statewide screening programs. One follows high risk infants through early childhood to flag health problems. The second tests for infant communication disorders.

Finally, Hein is a scientist—investigating and reporting it all in journal articles that approach 40 in number. His articles appear in prestigious publications such as The Journal of the American Medical Association and Pediatrics.

"I set goals," Hein said, "and I don't go home until I clear the day's calendar. I'm not a workaholic, although I suspect a lot of people will live longer than I and with better coronary arteries."

Last summer Hein and his wife, Carol Bergquist '58, missed their vacation because their son, Paul, 20, was sped to his father's place of employment as an emergency patient following a motorcycle accident.

"Iowa can feel proud of the University Hospital. In many other hospitals, Paul wouldn't have survived."

It's the same gratitude that parents of those 5,000 infants feel toward Hein.

Number of new students with alumni parents hits new mark

Remember the first time you moved into a Wartburg dorm room? The odds are good that the number of suitcases you toted up the dorm stairs and down the corridor totalled two. Three suitcases, at most.

Things are different at colleges today, and Wartburg is no exception. Students bring more.

Among the parents of Wartburg's new students are 59 alumni, and those alumni could compare the quantity of things their son or daughter brought to the "good old days" when three suitcases were a lot.

Last August, students and their parents were unloading pickup trucks and rented trailers full of belongings. Some were building "lofts," those architectural marvels that raise the bed to allow a split-level room. Lofts make the room large enough to accommodate an over-stuffed coach, recliner, bean bag chair, popcorn popper, hot pot, small refrigerator, and television and stereo.

This year's total of new transfer students and freshmen with alumni parents is 42. It beats — by one student — the previous record of 41 in 1984.
